DEMONSTRATIVES PRONOUNSON AND ONES

On/ ones

One is a pronoun that is used to substitute for a countable noun in the singular, thus avoiding unnecessary repetition, I've bought these two lipsticks. - I bought these two lipsticks Instead, we will use ones when it substitutes countable names in plural

How much? and How many?

In English the uncountable don't know can be used with a / an article. It is wrong to say money. Nor can they be pluralized 3 electricity's. Rather, they use the verb in the singular. The sugar is. They are also characterized by the fact that uncountable carry quantifiers like much and little and countable uses many and few.

Examples

How many cars do you have? // ¿Cuántos autos tienes?
How much money do you have? // ¿Cuánto dinero tienes?
How many birds are there? // ¿Cuántas aves hay?

Demonstrative adjectives, affirmative, negative and question forms

Regularly adjectives
