

Nombre de alumno:

Jaime Enrique Prats Gómez
jimmyprats25@gmail.com

Nombre del profesor:

Academic advisor
María de los Ángeles Rabelo

Nombre del trabajo:

Test
Importance of the English language
in the nursing career

Materia:

English IV

Grado:

4° Quarter

Grupo:

“U”

Comitán de Domínguez, Chiapas a 12 de septiembre de 2019.

Introduction

English is the language of international communication, commerce and finance. English is a lingua franca in many corners of the planet and the official language of many International Organizations such as the European Union, the United Nations or Unesco. This is due to historical and political reasons, due to the importance of the British Empire in the past, when it spread its language across all continents, and the importance as a current power of the United States.

Importance of the ENGLISH language in Nursing Degree

For us as students of the LIC. NURSING Learning the ENGLISH LANGUAGE is very important, since through it we learn its value in all areas of professional nursing practice, however, the greatest scientific utility will develop competence in the use of the language, especially to work in the foreigner, although mastering English will allow us better professional opportunities, perceiving the efficient level and considering the academic training offer, understanding in this way that the UNIVERSITY in which we are studying the level degree, allows us the accreditation required both in the courses academics and abroad.

As a student we must participate in important work competitions to reach the current level that in the future we can perform professionally, believe in our own development as a satisfactory level that will guarantee the result and differentiate us from other colleagues.

The student or person finds that studying English enriches their personal and professional life, revealing new cultures to feel active in a European community or any part of the world where this type of language is spoken, improving job opportunities, having strategies aimed at responding to the needs to develop proficiency in the management of English as a characteristic and a good result of recent study of the training in the DEGREE OF NURSING, thus being able to highlight the need to promote learning and be able to help sick people when presented by a foreigner in our country to be able to communicate and improve your health and that you take a good impression of us towards your country.

Nowadays the need to learn English in the nursing career is a formation of the curricula, although the importance of the training indicates the need to promote, learn and use the English language both in nurses, regardless of the field of practice and educational level, in all these cases the activities related to evidence-based research and professional communication can be argued, something that seems to be clear can facilitate or hinder entry to a foreign hospital.

Within the scientific field we will further develop our teaching skills since we will be able to read the types of drugs that enter our country or while being abroad will facilitate the task of knowing how to identify them.

Nursing citizens have the scientific incorporation in general practice, having the relationship with the design and evaluation of the most outstanding international programs and projects in nursing among other English-speaking institutions.

Conclusión

As a student and nursing professional, having reasoned the importance of this language in our career, I can emphasize that it enriches us in Job Opportunities, Having a good education, Being able to travel to different places that we do not know, knowing new cultures and people, enjoying the moments and tourist places, helping sick people, self-improvement and improving the world's health skill.

