Chuck: Because I needed the money. And I love it. So, what do you think?
Melissa: Well, uh . . .

Ian: Where did you grow up, Lim?

Lim: I grew up in a small town in northern California. Close to San Francisco.

Ian: Oh wow. Was it nice?

Lim: Yes, it was very nice. In those days, there wasn't much tourism. And life was quiet. The forest was beautiful, and so was the beach.

Ian: And why did you leave?

Lim: I left for the first time to go to college in LA – at UCLA, actually.

Ian: Oh wow. Good school. What did you study?

Lim: I studied computer science.

Ian: Did you enjoy it?

Lim: Yeah, I did. But I never worked as a programmer. I actually ended up as a salesman, selling computer systems to companies.

Ian: And what brought you to New York?

Lim: Well, in my last year at college, I met a girl. She was the most beautiful girl in the world... Or at least that's what I thought.

Ian: What was her name?

Lim: Her name was Laura. She studied art. She was a bit of a bohemian.

Ian: Sounds good!

Lim: It was, for a while, I moved to New York with her, and got a new job selling computer systems here. We lived together in Brooklyn. We were happily in love for a couple of years. After we broke up, I just stayed.

Ian: And here you are...

Lim: Yeah, here I am.
