IRELAND

The name of the place is Ireland. Ireland is a country constitutional with a parliamentary system of government. In north-western Europe, its capital and largest city is Dublin, which is located on the eastern side of the island. The flag of Ireland is a tricolor of green, white and orange. The colors represent the Gaelic tradition (green) and the followers of William of Orange in Ireland (orange), with white representing the aspiration for peace between them. Irish cuisine was traditionally based on meat and dairy products, supplemented with vegetables and seafood. Ireland is known for the full Irish breakfast, which involves a fried or grilled meal generally consisting of rashers, egg, sausage, white and black pudding, and fried tomato. A dry stout that originated in the brewery of Arthur Guinness at St. James's Gate in Dublin. An important tradition of this country is the St. Patrick's Day. It is the day of the largest national holiday in the country where everything is dressed in green and the day of the patron of Ireland is celebrated in style. Thousands of visitors flock to the island to celebrate the biggest national holiday with the locals. Also, the Cliffs of Moher are one of the top attractions to see in Ireland. From there, people can enjoy magnificent views of the Atlantic Ocean and the Aran Islands. In addition to what is mentioned before, I personally think that Ireland is an interesting country, thanks to its magnificent natural landscapes, its particular culture, the warmth of its people, its literary heritage and its wild regions surrounded by the sea.
