

Activity 2

An old carpenter named Geppetto makes a wooden puppet in the shape of a little boy. Geppetto felt a great attachment to this puppet to the point that he felt in his heart the need for this wooden doll to be real. By coincidences of life, a little fairy, passing by and listening to him, granted her wish, giving life to this wooden puppet. Pinocchio, despite having life, is still made of wood, to which the fairy conditioned him to have a generous, obedient behavior and, above all, to be sincere in order to be completely a real boy.

The fairy gave him "Jiminy the Cricket" as a friend and companion who would also be the conscience of this wooden boy. Pinocchio is a mischievous boy who does not know how to comply with the fairy rules and constantly gets into trouble, something characteristic of Pinocchio is that every time he lies his nose grows, so it was difficult for him not to be discovered.

Wood manages to get out of his pranks thanks to his good heart and the support of his friend Jiminy the cricket. Only when the fairy confirms Pinocchio's good heart and is worthy of this great gift, does he grant his father Geppetto's beautiful wish by turning him into a real boy.

Past continuous

Future continuous

Introduction

Climax

The end