IMPORTANT DAYS IN CANADA

Victoria Day is a holiday commemorating the birthday of Queen Victoria, the British monarch, and falls on the Monday before May 24.

Canada Day is a celebration in honor of the anniversary of the founding of the country as an independent state. On July 1, 1867, three English colonies - Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Province of Canada - united and created what it calls "Canadian Confederation".

Ottawa Tulip Festival

Three million flowers bloom in Canada's national capital every May during the Ottawa Tulip Festival. Visitors can admire these brilliant blooms aboard the festival's shuttle service or during a guided tulip tour.

Language

Canada is bilingual, with English and French as official languages. English takes precedence in legal proceedings outside Quebec, and English versions of all statutes serve as the final arbiter in disputes over interpretation. While that of native French speakers was just under 24 percent.

Canadian customs and traditions

Calgary Stampede

The Calgary Stampede is a large rodeo festival held in Alberta for 10 days each summer, usually from July 4-14. It is one of the largest events in Canada and is considered one of the largest outdoor shows in the world.

Popular sports in Canada "hockey"

There is no way to talk about the customs and traditions of Canada without mentioning ice hockey: the most popular sport in the country. This modality has passionate fans, who fill every game of their teams.

Polar bear swimming

The polar bear swim is one of Canada's coldest customs literally speaking. If you think we're kidding, just imagine a bunch of Canadians in their skivvies jumping into the ocean in the dead of winter.

Typical Canadian clothing

Canadian national clothing was formed under the influence of the native Indians who lived in these lands for centuries. Traditional clothing in Canada corresponds to the climatic conditions of this part of the world. That is why traditional Canadian clothing includes: parkas, tuques, ojibwa shirts, gloves, earmuffs, etc.

Typical Canadian clothing

For the first place of typical Canadian food is the Poutine, which is a mix of french fries, cheese in grain and meat sauce.
