

Resumen

Hugo Leonel Espinosa Hidalgo

Past continous, future continous

Parcial 2

Ingles 2

Andrea Berenice Segura Leon

Licenciatura en enfermería

Cuatrimestre 2

The paper rocket

INTRODUCTION

Once upon a time there was a boy whose greatest dream was to have a rocket and shoot it towards the moon, but he had so little money that he could not buy any. One day, by the sidewalk, he discovered the box of one of his favorite rockets, but when he opened it, he discovered that it only contained a small damaged paper rocket, the result of a mistake in the factory.

CLIMAX

The boy was very upset, but thinking that he finally had a rocket, he began to prepare a stage to launch it. For many days he collected papers of all shapes and colors, and devoted himself with all his soul to drawing, cutting, gluing and coloring all the stars and planets to create a paper space. Since then, the boy enjoyed playing with his paper rocket every day, until a classmate visited his room and, seeing that spectacular setting, proposed to exchange it for a real rocket he had at home. This nearly drove him mad with joy, and he accepted the change delightedly.

THE END.

Then he realized that he felt much better when he played with those toys that he himself had built with effort and enthusiasm.

And so, that boy began to build all his toys himself, and when he grew up, he became the best toy maker in the world.

Sentences identified in past continuous and future continuous.

- 1: Once upon a time there was a boy whose
- 2: Was to have a rocket and shoot it towards the moon
- 3: The boy was very upset, but thinking that he finally had a rocket
- 4: and devoted himself with all his soul to drawing, cutting, gluing and coloring.
- 5: Since then, the boy enjoyed playing with his paper rocket every day