INTRODUCTION

In this story the characters of the tortoise and the hare are developed, the step by step of how the story happens, when you know what your abilities are, but if you do not power correctly you can lose many things. The fast and tenacious beat the slow and stable.

The hare and the tortoise challenge each other to a race to see which of the two is faster. Obviously the hare starts at the head and in a short time has a great advantage over its slow competitor. Seeing himself with victory in his pocket, the hare decides to sit down to rest in the shade of a tree and falls asleep. When he wakes up, the tortoise is about to cross the finish line and although the hare made a great effort to resume the race, the tortoise ends up winning the race.

With a great lunge, the tortoise stretched out its long neck and touched the bark of the elm just before the panting hare reached it. He had won the race! The spectators applauded enthusiastically. And they patted the turtle on its broad, smooth shell.

Characters:

- Tortoise
- Hare

One day in a forest far away, there was a hare who was very proud and vain, who loved to boast that he was the fastest and most agile animal among all the others. And the hare learned that we shouldn't make fun of others and that we shouldn't trust ourselves, because arrogance can make us lose the race. The turtle taught us that step by step, slowly, but without pause, the goal is also reached.

- The turtle never gave up
