Hello, good morning everyone. My name is Daniela López Álvaro and today I am a character that has been created by Jose Guadalupe Posada, who was a painter and an illustrator. I am a figure closely associated with the day of the Dead "Día de muertos" since I have been a very popular character, especially on this date. I was created in 1910. I am known in most of the world. My clothing consists of a long and elegant dress. I also wear a headpiece on my head with very brightly colored flowers and high heels because they make me look more elegant.

I am the representative that death is becoming more and more alive

From the end of October to the beginning of November, I am placed on altars for offerings to the dead who are celebrated and welcomed to one of the most important festivities in the world. This tradition comes from more than 500 years of pre-hispanic culture, just as I am known as the goddess of death and one of the most representative figures on these dates.
