Hello, my name is Alejandro Jaime Loya, I am nineteen years old, I am from Tuxtla Gutierrez, I live in Comitán de Domínguez at my grandparents' house, I really like horse racing and fighting roosters, I am studying a degree in veterinary medicine and zootechnics at the University of the Southeast (UDS). I have an older brother who lives and works in Tijuana with my mother. I like some sports like football, mixed martial arts, charrería and motocross. During my nineteen years I have worked in different things like planting corn and beans with my grandfather, taking care of livestock, in an auto parts store, in a construction materials store, selling toys in elementary school, selling candy with my girlfriend in high school and my last job was in the summer holidays before entering university was buying and selling cattle, horses, pigs and other farm animals, I have three pet dogs along with my fighting roosters and with my girlfriend we have two giant rabbits and a minipig as pets, I have been raising farm roosters for approximately a year and a half. fight, which is one of the things I currently do, apart from riding horses, taking care of livestock and spending time with my girlfriend and her family, I live with my grandparents because from a very young age they were the ones who took care of me and took care of me. That's why I have great affection for them. My purpose of studying this degree is because in the future we want to start a veterinary clinic with my girlfriend and work together. I also want to dedicate myself to artificial insemination of livestock, specialize in large species and one day reach to be an internationally recognized cockfighter.
