TRADITIONAL KOREAN CULTURE

Hanbok (traditional costume)

The hanbok has been the traditional costume of the Korean people for thousands of years. The beauty and elegance of this culture can be seen in photographs of women dressed in hanbok. Before the advent of Western-style clothing 100 years ago, the hanbok was everyday attire. Men wore the jeogori (jacket) with baji (pants), while women wore the jeogori with chima (skirt). Nowadays, hanbok is worn on special occasions such as weddings, Seollal (Lunar New Year's Day) and Chuseok (Thanksgiving Day).

oriental medicine

Eastern medicine considers reduced vital energy and a weakened immune system to be the cause of illness - not a problem with a particular part of the body, but rather an imbalance of the vital forces of the entire body. Therefore, Eastern medicine seeks to treat disease by strengthening the immune system and restoring harmony within the body, not by eliminating pathogenic factors. The main fields of oriental medicine include herbal medicine, acupuncture, moxibustion treatment, and cupping therapy.
