Function Hepatic

What is it?

This is what is known as blood tests that can help diagnose and monitor liver diseases. It is a common cause of morbidity and mortality in animal practice.

Causes

Although they are not common, the animals most likely to present this disease are due to nature due to injuries.

Diagnosis

The most effective way to diagnose this condition is through an ultrasound or, if more technology is available, it can be diagnosed using myelography, CT or magnetic resonance imaging.

Treatment

The treatment that may be suggested is local resection of the tumor from the nerve root, amputation of the involved limb or hemilaminectomy for nerve sheath tumors.
