Yesterday, I came across him at the park, and he looked really down. I told him to cheer up and invited him to join us for a picnic. He said he needed to look after his little sister, so I offered to help him out. We picked her up and brought her to the park. She was thrilled to see us and ran around playing games. Later, we all sat down to eat. After a while, she got tired, so we took her home. It was a great day, and I hope it lifted his spirits. Afterward, we decided to hang out more often to keep in touch and support each other.
