

THE FLAG

gastronomy

Italian gastronomy is one of the favorites in the world and is characterized by its fresh ingredients, its simple recipes and its natural cooking methods.

Every year, Italians consume a large amount of pasta. Without a doubt, pasta is the typical Italian food par excellence. Italy is one of the countries that produces the most wine per year, its soils and climate make the creation very favorable. Its mountains and alps are the perfect settings for vineyards.

Language

Sicilian, Neapolitan, Romanesque, and Venetian are dialects of Italian. Several dialects are spoken and other minor ones are spoken in the different provinces of Italy.

Italy is located in southern Europe, in the center of the Mediterranean. It forms a peninsula that extends from the Alps to the vicinity of the African coast. It borders to the north with France, Switzerland, Austria and Slovenia.

Who has more power in Italy, the president or the prime minister?

The president of the Council of Ministers of Italy is the head of the country's government, and holds one of the five most important positions at the state level, being the equivalent of the prime minister of other governments, although with lesser powers with respect to other states.

why italy is so famous?

Italy is recognized for its art, its culture and its numerous monuments, including the Tower of Pisa and the Roman Colosseum; as well as for its gastronomy (famous Italian dishes are pizza and pasta), its wine, its style of life

