

Mi Universidad

Nombre : Alberto Bermúdez Trujillo

Materia: inglés

Plataforma

Historia

Timmy el adicto a los videojuegos

In a small town, there was a boy named Timmy who loved to play video games. He would spend hours and hours in front of the screen, playing adventure, strategy, and action games. His parents always warned him not to play too much, but Timmy didn't listen to them. Over time, Timmy began to notice that his vision was deteriorating. At first, he thought it was just because he was tired, but he soon realized that he couldn't see things clearly. His parents took him to the doctor, and after a series of tests, the diagnosis was devastating: Timmy had lost his sight due to prolonged screen exposure. Timmy was devastated. He couldn't imagine his life without video games. His parents tried to comfort him, but Timmy felt like he had lost a part of himself. Over time, Timmy began to adjust to his new reality. He learned to read braille and navigate his house with the help of a cane. He also discovered that there were other hobbies he could enjoy, such as music and writing. Although Timmy never played video games again, he learned to appreciate life in a different way. He realized that there was a world beyond the screen, and that life was much richer and more complex than he had imagined. Timmy's story is an important reminder of the dangers of spending too much time in front of a screen. Although video games can be fun and exciting, it is important to find a healthy balance between technology and real life.