I tell you my story... It is very meaningful to me. What was and what was happening in my life, my childhood, my adolescence. Even with life's problems, we are born, we grow and we develop... That's what science says, but science does not solve the difficult thing in life. I will tell you about an important event, transcendental in my existence, waiting to satisfy the requirements, not of the narrative but of the required tenses.

Since my early childhood I liked the topic of health, I was watching when my grandfather or my grandmother, empirical nurses, were giving an injection in the vein or in the buttock, in a sick person, or performing any other clinical therapy. I learned a lot from my mother and father; I studied a lot...

While I was studying, my mother was working. Anyway, that's how my adolescence was going. The time was also approaching to choose which professional career to study. But my father was thinking of something else for me to study to be a teacher, but I studied little, it was only two periods and I left school. I was thinking if I did wrong, but I don't think so. Today I study nursing and I am very happy. Everyone in my family is studying. My older sister was studying, but she already graduated. I appreciate that you read the story that pleasantly marked my life.

My little story, my little life... I was getting frustrated and I saw my success far away, but today I can say: that I have triumphed. I already triumphed... will graduate soon.
