Once upon a time, there was a young boy named Charles who lived in a small village. One day, while walking through the woods, he heard a strange noise. As he explored, he noticed a small dog stuck in some branches. Charles slowly approached it, and as he did, the dog barked nervously.

Carlos decided to help the dog. As he freed him, he thought about how he had gotten there. He remembered that the night before, he had seen a group of people in the village who had let their pets loose. After a few minutes of effort, he finally managed to get the dog out of his trap.

As Carlos petted the dog, he noticed that he had a collar with a name on it. The dog's name was Max. Carlos decided to take him home. As they walked back, Carlos thought about how happy he was to have found Max and how his day had changed. From that moment on, Carlos and Max became great friends and went on many adventures together.
