INTRODUCTION:

In this work I will present three people very close to me, each one standing out for the things they do best and in the best way they perform in their daily lives, bringing them to know through comparative and superlative words, highlighting each of the things they do best of themselves and thus with the help of other people, making known how they are and then comparing themselves with each other.

The reason or motive for which I chose to talk about those three people is the way they behave and compare each one of them to how they are and make known the differences between each one.

First person: Abidan

Abidan is a good boy. He is studying to be a chef. He is fully demonstrating all his qualities as a chef and has also drawn his attention to being a bartender, where he wants to focus more on that aspect. Since he was little, he has shown his ability to do so he is funnier than Milton and taller than Milton, one of his closest friends with whom he shared time in high school and in the same way with Jacqueline, she is smarter than both of them and someone to admire, and also seeing how she deals with the difficulties in her life since she wants to be a nurse.

Second person: Jacqueline

Jacqueline the second to describe she is a wonderful person, she is incredible in many ways always stands out in academics and shows that she is better than her other classmates she is short but very funny and charismatic like a comedian as well as with a strong character and with decisions already made from now on much like, she always plans what she does before acting and that is one of the things that is admired about her just as she is good at studying she also works on weekends and in the short time that she has been there she has established herself as one of the best workers in the place earning the respect of the owner and other coworkers

Third person: Milton

Milton, the third person we will talk about is a waiter and has worked in many restaurants and bars always standing out for his characteristics that make him the best of any other coworker quickly gaining the trust of his employers and showing that he can improve any establishment where he works improving customer service completely and contributing good ideas always earning the leadership of the place

I was forgetting to mention that Milton always tries to help his coworkers and friends showing that he is a complete leader wherever he works always worrying about his interests and those of his colleagues.
