present continuous:

My father was living here last year, in my house.

Together with my mother, they looked at the moon every day.

He was living here, happy.

My brothers and I shared that happiness.

One day when my father came back from a walk.

The cat was playing with a ball.

We were studying.

My grandmother was reading, at that moment a strong earthquake occurred.

The whole family was scared, my mother was shaking, my father was in shock.

And I was recording so I could recap what happened that day.

present perfect:

My life has not been easy.

We have had to work hard to survive.

I have worked day and night.

I am happy because I have finished my professional project at the university, besides

I have reflected on my future working life, and that's why I study.

I am sure I will succeed.

Future:

Next Tuesday my uncles and cousins will come to my brother Javier's graduation.

I am sure it will be a great party.

The whole family will be dressed in jeans.

The best musicians in the city will sing.

We will have fun.
